OFFICE ORDERS

RESEARCH & CONSULTANCY DEVELOPMENT CELL (R&D CELL)

The role of the Research and Consultancy Development Cell is to evaluate whether a proposed project is consistent with the Institute's mission, whether the appropriate resources are in place to conduct the research, and whether the study outcomes are likely to be useful. The Research Committee is responsible for the overall performance of the research activities of the institute.

The Committee develops the research infrastructure and capabilities of the College. This will require dedicating a certain amount of soft and hard infrastructure towards creating a research atmosphere in the College. The Committee promotes and encourages research in certain thematic areas identified by the College. The research will be conducted either by the College faculty or visiting scholars and fellows. This will require developing a medium- and long-term research agenda and strategy. The Research Committee provides an ethical framework and quality control mechanism for the research work carried out in the College. This will require the development of a Research Council/Committee to approve and provide funding for research internally and an Institutional Review Board (IRB) to provide certification of Ethics review for research conducted in the College.

The composition of the Research & Consultancy Development Cell (R&D Cell) is provided as under:
